

In addition, I experienced my daily trips to the vet. An IV was connected to me and that caused that my body swell from the fluid.

Before I walked in, I was still pretty slim. I even got a few wet noses between my legs on the way to the doctor's office.

On the way back I was round. Unrecognizable. The wet noses that previously found me so attractive, no longer showed themselves.

I left them in shock.

With clenched buttocks, I waddled out to rid myself of some of the fluids administered.

I had to undergo this scene for several days.

On the last day, a thorough investigation was added

The words that had been spoken were no joy or shine.

Good luck, I just heard when leaving the building.

My body started to feel better, didn't it.....'
